Sardine Fishermen Catch Biggest Hauls at Night

SAN FRANCISCO — Sardine fishing, California's 60 million dollar industry, is geared to the phases of the moon, according to Dr. Robert C. Miller, director of the California Academy of Sciences.

Miller pointed out that sardine fishing is carried on in darkness, and "not only at dead of night, but in the dark of the moon."

He explained that California fishermen locate schools of sardines by the luminescent streak they make in the water by stirring up microscopic organisms. On the other hand, he said, in Washington, Oregon and British Columbia, the sardine fishermen do their fishing in full daylight.

Another strange fact, he observed, is that fishermen from the northwest who can find their sardines in daylight without much trouble, take to night fishing when they come to California.

U. S. Army Sergeant Befriends Crippled Orphan Boy in China

NANKING—A soldier of the United States army advisory group in Nanking has befriended a one-legged Chinese boy and is paying for his schooling, according to a recent report in the Chinese press.

He is Sergeant L. Beckwith, of the medical department, and the boy is Che'en Li-chang, whose father was killed while fighting the Japanese in 1937.

Li-chang's mother is believed to have perished when Japanese bombing planes destroyed a refugee train in 1944. Li-chang lost his leg in the raid.

A passing American truck driver saw the boy lying by the roadside and brought him to the hospital.

From then on the unit became his guardian. Wearing a cut-down uniform and traveling with his American protectors, Li-chang passed from city to city in China. And as his various "fathers" left the unit, each in turn handed him over to another.

He finally ended up as the charge of Sergeant Beckwith, a devout Christian and a former captain in the Salvation Army.

The sergeant, speaking of the boy's upkeep, said:

"The biggest expense, oddly, enough, is buying him shoes. Although Li-chang has only one leg I have to buy him shoes in pairs and as he is lively and his weight is all borne by one shoe it wears out twice as fast as a normal boy's.

The sergeant recently asked Li-chang if he would like to go to America. To his surprise the boy said he could not. He was a Chinese he added, and wanted to live in China all his life.

Li-chang said he wants to train as a doctor so that he can help his fellow countrymen as he has been helped.

Weak Egg Shells Mean Hens Require Calcium

Feeding oyster shells to laying hens to furnish the calcium needed for making strong egg shells is suggested by Irving J. Mork, agent of the North Dakota Agricultural college extension service.

"Hens that lay steadily will, as time goes on, lay eggs with weak shells," he said. "Usually this is due to a lack of calcium in the ration. It can also be due to a lack of vitamin D, however."

THE WORLD'S BIGGEST REASON for Thanksgiving . . .

During the last war, G. I.'s scattered all over the globe learned first-hand that men in other lands think how blessed are Americans because they have the privilege of living in the greatest nation in the world.

It's true that every man has something for which he can be thankful. This is as it should be. Yet today there are millions who must look long and search hard for blessings sufficient to balance the day-after-day hardships under which they live.

Americans — all of us — owe to ourselves a solemn obligation to be, not smugly pleased with our lot, but deeply grateful for our nation's heritage, for liberty, for opportunity . . . and for the privilege of living as we do.

The United States itself is the world's biggest reason why we who live here have so much more to be thankful for than the less fortunate people in any other land in the world.
